Level and alignment

Grade 6 • New Jersey • Grammar; L.SS.6.1. Focus: Use subject, object, and possessive pronouns and clarify their referents.

What is included

One cover; one teacher guide; one mini-lesson with two explained models; 1 original text/reference section(s); 16 practice tasks on four pages; one four-task exit check; four answer-key pages covering all 20 tasks; two access/source/license pages. Student texts are original, not extracted from released tests.

Time and sequence

Two 30–40-minute sessions plus a 10–15-minute exit check; extended writing or speech rehearsal may take longer. Model first; use tasks 1–4 to check readiness; practice the remainder in short groups; give tasks 17–20 without the key.

Preparation

Print student pages separately from teacher pages. Provide pencils and extra paper; oral-response learners need an adult recorder. Review word meanings and prerequisite decoding or sentence skills. No paid app, novel, or external reading is required.

Student directions

Read the lesson and supplied text or reference. Attempt each task before viewing the key. Explain when asked. Use separate paper for full drafts or longer answers; the PDF is not a fillable form.

Learn the move

Use subject forms for the doer (I, she, he, we, they); object forms after a verb or preposition (me, her, him, us, them); possessive forms to show belonging (my/mine, her/hers, our/ours). For a compound, temporarily remove the other noun to hear the case. Name an unclear referent instead of guessing. This is focused practice within L.SS.6.1.

Model 1 • Choose: Mira and (I/me) prepared the display.

I. Removing Mira leaves “I prepared,” the subject.

Model 2 • Repair ambiguity: Sam told Lee that he had the key.

If Sam has it: Sam told Lee, “I have the key.” If Lee has it: Sam told Lee, “You have the key.” State the intended meaning.

Try the task first. Then compare the reasoning, not just the final word.

Case and clarity reference

Subject: I, you, he, she, it, we, they. Object: me, you, him, her, it, us, them.

Possessive before noun: my, your, his, her, its, our, their. Independent possessive: mine, yours, his, hers, ours, theirs. Possessive its has no apostrophe; it's means it is or it has.

Practice • Read, reason, respond

Read the lesson and supplied text or reference. Attempt each task before viewing the key. Explain when asked. Use separate paper for full drafts or longer answers; the PDF is not a fillable form.

Access and next teaching steps

AIG

Ask for a counterexample, an alternative supported interpretation, or a newly written item with an explanation. Add depth rather than speed.

504

Follow the individual plan: breaks, enlarged print, extra time, reduced copying, or an alternative response method as documented. These are classroom options, not a statement of permitted test accommodations.

EC

Follow the IEP; show one task at a time, model the first decision, and permit dictated reasoning when appropriate. For decoding practice, distinguish an adult-read direction from an adult-read target word.

ESL

Preview task verbs and key vocabulary, allow home-language planning, and offer “My answer is ___ because ___.” Evaluate the targeted skill separately from unrelated language errors. For French, retain the target French sentence while explaining directions in a familiar language.

Use the exit evidence

For each exit task, record 2 = accurate and complete for the stated prompt; 1 = partly accurate or missing a requested explanation; 0 = not yet demonstrated. Total 0–8 is a local teaching note, not a standardized score. For oral tasks do not penalize spelling or handwriting. Revisit the exact type of error rather than assigning a diagnostic label.

Next lesson: model one missed decision, let the learner try a new example, and compare the explanation. Extend only after the learner can explain the targeted skill.
